When you're not sure where to start to grow your business, it's best to avoid multi-tasking no matter what. Multi-tasking can creep in, in the sneakiest of methods.

For example;

Are you trying to learn the technology while you're learning the marketing?

Are you trying to invent your program during a booking call?

Are you trying to email out your clients while creating your branding?

That is not how you can give best service to your client and to your family. There is a better way of doing this.

Mondays = Administration days.

It's been a whole week end since you've looked at your diary and you're not sure where to start. So spend today tying up loose ends.

Tuesdays = Clients

If you have no clients to see, then call some to book them in. If you have no leads, then make today a marketing day.

Wednesday = Marketing

This is the day where you think about 2 things.

1. Your Traffic; where do I get new leads into my web page?
2. Your Data Base; is your web page good enough to convert traffic into names, email addresses and phone numbers.

Thursdays = Clients

If you have no clients to see, then call some to book them in. If you have no leads, then make today a marketing day.

Friday = Clients

If you have no clients to see, then call some to book them in. If you have no leads, then make today a marketing day.
